THE NEXT LEGISLATURE.

The Fifty-second General Assembly, which convenes on the first Tuesday of January, 1921, will be pronouncedly Republican. The present Assembly consists of thirty-four Republican and seventeen Democratic senators and ninety Republicans and sixty-three Democrats in the House.

Under the law a senatorial committee of the respective political party in each district meets thirty days before the primary election and designates the number of representatives it will elect.

This is pursuant to the constitutional provision respecting minority representation. These designations are generally agreed upon by the party senatorial committees.

The next State Senate will probably be unchanged politically, consisting of the same number of Republicans and Democrats.

TOO MUCH TAXATION ON BUSINESS AND THE REMEDY.

There is too much direct taxation on business and our law makers are not using good judgment.

The wealth of this country has been built up by savings out of profits in business. There are no such savings today. One of the pessimistic influences in the present situation is that, whereas in former periods of booms in business, the merchant who made a large profit, while spending liberally, was enabled to put generous sums back into his business to provide for the reaction that was certain to come, we now have a situation where, due to the last three years of business boom, profits have been large; yet merchants have had to pay out of either income taxes or excess profits taxes, practically all that they have earned over their living expenses, and when the losses due to the readjustment of values are registered, many will have suffered material reductions in their resources, which would ordinarily be relied upon to meet these losses.

If this keeps up business will be knocked out.

There is only one way to escape this, and that is through a tax on sales, in which every citizen of the United States, as well as any foreigner who may live within our shores will pay equally toward the expenses of the Government and have his stake in the country.
